

Force and friction

Grade : VIII A and B

Students explored the concept of friction by conducting hands-on experiments using various surfaces and materials. They observed how surface texture, weight, and contact area affect friction. Through these activities, they discovered that rougher surfaces create more resistance. They also experimented with inclined planes to see how friction slows motion. These practical tasks deepened their understanding of friction's real-life applications.

